

Success!

Name: Heidi
Condition: Constant Neck Pain

After having reconstructive surgery, I developed neck problems. My neck was constantly in pain, mainly on the left side. It was extremely difficult to control neck movement- there was an almost continuous jerking to the left. To turn my head to the right, I had to manually turn it with my hand.

Doctors treated me with physical therapy, and later, Botox injections in several areas in the back of the neck. The physical therapy only made it worse. The Botox was a very temporary fix which eventually caused me the inability to swallow because it relaxed the throat muscles as well as the neck muscles.

I suffered this way for over nine years.

When I came to Crowder Specific Chiropractic, the staff was wonderful; they listened, are very in tune with my problem, were very concerned about my well being and correcting the problem. Doctor Crowder always explains thoroughly the purpose of what he is going to do. He will always take as much time as needed in explaining, assessing, and addressing the problem. My only regret is that I could not come more often.

As for the treatment, I am now able to control my neck movements- something I was unable to do for years, and the pain has diminished tremendously.

My husband and I have recommended Doctor Crowder to many people and will continue to do so. We have sent friends to see him and all of them have been most grateful.
